7) Give an account of the relationship between ethics and law.

Answer: Ethics and the law are intertwined. Although much of the law is based on ethical standards, not all ethical standards have been enacted as law. The law establishes a minimum degree of conduct expected by persons and businesses in society. Ethics demands more.

Sometimes the rule of law and the rule of ethics demand the same response by a person confronted with a problem. In some situations, the law may permit an act that is ethically wrong.

In some others, the law demands certain conduct, but a person's ethical standards are contrary.

62) Explain the two principles on which the universal rules of Kantian ethics are based.

Answer: The universal rules of Kantian ethics are based on two important principles:

(1) Consistency—that is, all cases are treated alike, with no exceptions—and

(2) Reversibility—that is, the actor must abide by the rule he or she uses to judge the morality of someone else's conduct. Thus, if one makes an exception for oneself, that exception becomes a universal rule that applies to all others.

63) What is ethical relativism?

Answer: Ethical relativism holds that individuals must decide what is ethical based on their own feelings about what is right and wrong. Under this moral theory, if a person meets his or her own moral standard in making a decision, no one can criticize him or her for it. Thus, there are no universal ethical rules to guide a person's conduct. This theory has been criticized because action that is usually thought to be unethical would not be unethical if the perpetrator thought it was ethical. Few philosophers advocate ethical relativism as an acceptable moral theory.

64) Describe the major tenets of Rawls's Social Justice Theory and identify two criticisms of this theory.

Answer: Developed by Harvard University philosopher John Rawls, Rawls's social justice theory considers fairness as the essence of justice. Further, this theory holds that the principles of justice should be chosen by persons who do not yet know their station in society—thus, their "veil of ignorance" would permit the fairest possible principles to be selected. Rawls also proposed that the least advantaged in society must receive special assistance to realize their potential.

Rawls's theory of social justice is criticized for two reasons. First, establishing the blind "original position" for choosing moral principles is impossible in the real world. Second, many persons in society would choose not to maximize the benefit to the least advantaged persons in society.

65) What is the social contract theory of morality?

Answer: Proposed by John Locke and Jean-Jacques Rousseau, the social contract theory of morality posits that each person is presumed to have entered into a social contract with all others in society to obey moral rules that are necessary for people to live in peace and harmony. This implied contract states, "I will keep the rules if everyone else does." These moral rules are then used to solve conflicting interests in society.

69) Steve Templeton, the CEO of Rolland Motor Company, is contemplating the shutdown of a plant in Kantron. The plant has been unprofitable for some time now, and there is increasing pressure from shareholders to shut it down so as to balance the loss being incurred by the shareholders. But closing the plant would be a blow to the employees as they will lose their jobs, and the local suppliers will lose a major buyer. There is also fear that the sudden closing of the plant will have an adverse effect on the community of Kantron, as the plant is one of the main sources of employment for the locals. Steve Templeton considered all these factors before making a decision on the fate of the plant. If Steve Templeton decides to close the plant in Kantron, what important business social responsibility will Steve Templeton accomplish?

- A) moral minimum
- B) corporate citizenship
- C) maximizing profits
- D) stakeholder interest

70) Sinbad Cola, a soft drink manufacturer, opened a plant in Buron. The waste from the plant was released into the Buron Sea, which was situated a mile away from the plant. Releasing the wastes into the sea resulted in water pollution and groundwater contamination. The water pollution in turn negatively affected Buron's fishing business. Sinbad Cola compensated for this by bringing the contamination levels down with additional filters and paying for the damages to the local fisheries. Which theory of business social responsibility did Sinbad Cola comply with when it compensated for its harmful waste disposal methods?

- A) moral minimum
- B) stakeholder interest

93) Give an account of the social responsibility of businesses. List its four main theories.

Answer: Businesses do not operate in a vacuum. Decisions made by businesses have far-reaching effects on society. In the past, many business decisions were based solely on a cost-benefit analysis and how they affected the bottom line. Such decisions, however, may cause negative externalities for others. Social responsibility requires corporations and businesses to act with awareness of the consequences and impact that their decisions will have on others. Thus, corporations and businesses are considered to owe some degree of responsibility for their actions. The four theories of the social responsibility of business are maximize profits, moral minimum, stakeholder interest, and corporate citizenship.

94) What is the moral minimum theory in the social responsibility of businesses?

Answer: Some proponents of corporate social responsibility argue that a corporation's duty is to make a profit while avoiding causing harm to others. This theory of social responsibility is called the moral minimum. Under this theory, as long as a business avoids or corrects the social injury it causes, it has met its duty of social responsibility. The legislative and judicial branches of government have established laws that enforce the moral minimum of social responsibility for corporations.

95) Describe the maximize profits theory of the social responsibility of business and identify the Nobel Prize-winning economist from the University of Chicago who advocated this theory.

Answer: The maximize profits theory is the traditional view of the social responsibility of business. This theory calls on businesses to maximize profits for its shareholders. This view, which dominated business and the law during the 19th century, holds that the interests of other constituencies (e.g., employees, suppliers, residents of the communities in which businesses are located) are not important in and of themselves. Milton Friedman, who won the Nobel Prize in economics when he taught at the University of Chicago, advocated the theory of maximizing profits for shareholders. Friedman asserted that in a free society, "there is one and only one social responsibility of business—to use its resources and engage in activities designed to increase its profits so long as it stays within the rules of the game, which is to say, engages in open and free competition without deception and fraud."
