 - *a. True
 - b. False

SHORT-ANSWER QUESTIONS

- 29. Assisted living has increased in popularity over the past twenty years. Describe two reasons why Assisted living has become popular and why?

Answer

Assisted living is a prominent and significant component of long-term care for older persons in the United States. Concerns regarding nursing home quality, states' interests in containing long-term care costs, as well as consumer demand have produced a dramatic growth in the industry. The assisted living industry is often referred to as the fastest growing segment of long-term care. The number of assisted living beds doubled between 1990 and 2002 (Harrington, Chapman, Miller, Miller, & Newcomer, 2005). In 2007, states reported 38,373 licensed assisted living/residential care communities with 974,585 units/beds, compared to 36,218 communities with 935,364 units/beds in 2004 (Mollica, Sims-Kastelein, & O'Keeffe, 2007). In a national report covering the years 2015 and 2016 prepared for the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, Harris-Kojetin, Sengupta, London, et al. (2019) reported a total of 28,900 communities with 996,100 beds. These numbers are indicative of the growth of larger sized communities.

- 30. As the interest in assisted living has increased, so has the quality of care and safety concerns. What are two reasons for the decline in quality and why is this happening?

Answer

As the interest in assisted living has increased, so have concerns about the quality of care and safety that can be provided to these residents that require special care, staffing, and physical and social environments. In contrast to nursing homes, no federal quality standards exist for assisted living. Additionally, states vary significantly in their licensing requirements, quality standards, monitoring, and enforcement activities (see Chapter 2).

Research, media and reports throughout the country dating back to 1999 (United General Accounting Office, 1999) have identified quality of care and consumer protection issues relative to the quality of care in residential care settings. Older persons receiving necessary care and services in a homelike and residential setting dedicated to preserving dignity and autonomy are attractive and appealing. These concerns continue today. The determination of what makes assisted living "good" remains an important question.

ESSAY QUESTIONS

31. There are numerous long-term care options for seniors. Describe at least five and give examples for each and what purpose/benefit they offer seniors.

Answer

Home care

Home care can include medical care (nursing, social work, rehabilitation therapies) and also help around the home. Skilled professionals come directly to the home to provide care. Home health aides or personal care service workers can visit daily or as needed to help with activities of daily living, such as bathing and grooming. They can also assist with housekeeping, meals, and shopping.

Adult Day Care (ADC)

Adult Day Health Care (ADHC)

Adult care programs are a type of long-term care that offers social interaction and meals from one to five days a week, depending on the program. Some adult care programs provide transportation to and from the care center. Activities often include exercises, games, trips, art, and music. Some adult care programs include medical services, such as help taking medications or checking blood pressure.

Senior Housing

This type of housing is often rental apartments that have been adapted for seniors, including railings installed in the bathrooms and power outlets placed higher on the walls. Other services offered by senior housing communities include meals, transportation, housekeeping, and activities.

Assisted Living/Community Based Residential Care

Assisted living communities offer room and board with provisions for assistance with activities of daily living (ADL) such as bathing, dressing, eating, grooming, continence, and eating. In addition, assistance with transportation, housekeeping, laundry, obtaining medical and social services, and the supervision of medications and other medical needs is often offered.

Skilled Nursing Facility (SNF) or Nursing Home

Skilled nursing facilities or nursing homes offer 24-hour nursing care. These services are for those who need more medical care than other long-term care options can offer, such as wound care, rehabilitative therapy, and help with respirators or ventilators.

32. With the growing and advancement of long-term care options for seniors, assisted living has grown the fastest. Why has assisted living become so popular? Please give four examples and explain the benefits to residents.

Answer

The setting for the delivery and receipt of long-term care is often discussed as a continuum, with one's own home at one end and the nursing home on the other. These end points also are used to symbolize the continuum from personal independence to institutionalization. Assisted living is typically considered as somewhere in between these extreme ends where personalized care and supervision can be provided outside of an institutionalized environment, with an emphasis of optimizing physical and psychological independence.

In general, assisted living communities offer room and board with provisions for assistance with activities of daily living (ADL) such as bathing, dressing, eating, grooming, continence, and eating. In addition, assistance with transportation, housekeeping, laundry, obtaining medical and social services, the supervision of medications, as well as other medical needs is often offered.

It is noted that the exact definition of assisted living remains a question, and that the ambiguity surrounding the various definitions and regulatory models used throughout the country make for great confusion for providers, consumers, and researchers. Some see this as a unique mix of services and privacy, while others view it as a new term for the type of care and assistance that has been available historically.

There has never been a single nationally accepted definition of an assisted living facility. Instead, states that have the responsibility for regulating the supportive housing industry have each developed their own definitions and guidelines. While there is much in common among the states, there are also differences in the terms used to label various housing types and levels of care, and variation in the standards and restrictions for which these operations are held accountable. Provider and trade associations, formal associations, and governmental agencies, as well as academic researchers have developed a vast variety of definitions designed to capture both the definition and essence of assisted living communities and suit their own needs and purposes.

In 1992, Lewin-VHI, Inc. (1996) conducted a literature review and policy synthesis for the Office of the Assistant Secretary for Planning and Evaluation, Administration on Aging, and the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services. They determined that overall, assisted living was used to refer to housing for the elderly with supportive services in a homelike environment; the term was used interchangeably throughout the states with other common labels, such as residential care and board and care. However, it was also determined that proponents of assisted living often assert that assisted living offers a special philosophy that includes maximizing functional capability and autonomy and utilizing the environment as an aid for independence and socialization that makes assisted living distinguishable from other types of supportive housing for the elderly.

33. With the rapid growth of assisted living, there has been a decline in quality of care and safety. Explain three reasons why quality of care and safety has declined and offer a recent example of each reason.

Answer

In order to address quality and safety in assisted living communities, it is important to know the population of residents residing in and being served within these settings. The research in this area (although limited by methodology) has begun to suggest that residents residing in these communities are becoming increasingly dependent and frail, which makes issues of quality and safety more critical. Residents enter assisted living communities from a variety of places including: 1) the community; 2) other assisted living communities; 3) skilled nursing facilities; 4) nursing homes; and 5) hospitals.

Length of Stay and Reasons for Leaving

The median stay in an assisted living facility is 22 months (National Center for Assisted Living, 2018). About 60% of residents in assisted living transitioned to a skilled nursing facility. Reasons for residents leaving assisted living include:

- Need for higher level of care (voluntary relocation or involuntary eviction)
- Locations closer to loved ones
- Dissatisfaction
- Financial Concerns/Running out of money

Sources of Payment in Assisted Living

Although Medicaid coverage for assisted living services has increased gradually, assisted living remains a primarily private-pay segment of long-term care. Therefore, the majority of assisted living residents pay with their own funds. Others receive some support from family members, and some have private long-term care insurance. The lack of public subsidies and often high costs of assisted living often make it unaffordable for persons with low to moderate incomes.

CHAPTER 2

POLICY, LICENSING AND REGULATIONS

MULTIPLE-CHOICE QUESTIONS

1. Why are state licensing and regulations difficult to describe?
 - a. They are highly variable
 - b. States continually change regulations
 - c. Assisted living is a broad category
 - d. States have different philosophies of care
 - *e. All of the above

 - *c. 16 beds or more older than 1987
 - d. 16 beds or less
 - e. None of the above
9. Why have there been historical problems with Resident Agreements?
 - a. Did not include discharge criteria
 - b. Did not explain how or why costs for care assistance changes
 - c. Did not describe services not provided by facility
 - d. Did not address grievance procedures
 - *e. All of the above
10. Most state regulations now require which of the following to be added to the Resident Agreement?
 - a. Quality of food rating and menu choices
 - *b. Admission and discharge criteria
 - c. Administrator contact information
 - d. Historic detail of regulatory violations
 - e. All of the above
11. The ALW (2003) included the following recommendations on contracts, except which of the following?
 - *a. A comprehensive description of how much the rent will increase each year
 - b. A policy to explain how the fees will be changed
 - c. A description of how payments will be made
 - d. The amount of advanced noticed required before fees will be changed
 - e. The policy for grievance procedures
12. The ALW workgroup (2003) made the following recommendations for pre-admission with the exception of which of the following:
 - a. Disclosure of advanced directive
 - *b. Disclosure of image or identity guidelines
 - c. Disclosure of specialized care programs
 - d. Disclosure of end of life care
 - e. Disclosure of the process of assessing residents

13. What are the typical admission and retention criteria in an assisted living?
 - a. Health-related conditions
 - b. Functional conditions
 - c. Physical function
 - d. Cognitive function
 - *e. All of the above
14. An example of Residents Rights in assisted living would be which of the following?
 - a. Right to root for the home team
 - b. Right to remain silent
 - c. Right to extra ice cream
 - d. Right to use image on social media
 - *e. Right to be treated with respect and dignity

 - *a. True
 - b. False

SHORT-ANSWER QUESTIONS

29. Resident agreements have historically been challenging for assisted living residents. Give three reasons why resident agreements needed reform and why.

Answer:

Dating back to 1999, the U.S. Government Accounting Office (GAO) reported that most assisted living communities provide information about services offered, but do not routinely provide information regarding discharge criteria, staff training and qualifications, services not available from the facility, grievance procedures, and medication policies. The majority of the 721 communities that responded to the GAO survey stated that they generally provide prospective residents written information about many of their services and costs before they apply for admission. However, only about half indicated that they provide information on the circumstances under which the cost of services may change their policy on medication assistance, or their practice for monitoring residents' needs. Furthermore, less than half said they provide written information in advance about discharge criteria, staff training and qualifications, or services not covered or available from the facility. The report concluded that the provision of adequate information to prospective and current residents is a major issue that requires additional oversight. This issue has become a key topic in assisted living today, with consumer advocates expressing on-going concern regarding the quality of resident agreements.

30. Resident rights in assisted living are essential. Give three examples and explain why it is important for resident rights to be required in the Assisted Living setting?

Answer:

The National Center for Assisted Living (2019), in their report 2019 Assisted Living State Regulatory Review, provided summary information and examples of the current changes in state policy across the country. Some examples are:

- More than half of states reported changes between June 2018 and June 2019 that will affect assisted living communities. Specifically, 27 states and the District of Columbia reported changes to a variety of requirements, either to the licensing requirements or to other regulations that also apply to assisted living providers (e.g., nursing scope of practice or life safety).
- Minnesota passed a bill finalizing comprehensive changes affecting assisted living providers. Effective in 2021 and subject to the rule-making process, the state will have two new levels of licensure: assisted living and assisted living with dementia care.
- States continue efforts to enhance protections for residents, which were the majority of changes. Specifically, the most common changes were to: disclosure or notification requirements, efforts to prevent or address alleged abuse or neglect, staff training, emergency preparedness and life safety.
- The most frequent change over the past year was an update to disclosure and notification requirements. Four states (Colorado, Minnesota, Oregon, and Virginia) and the District of Columbia passed laws requiring new types of notification either to the resident or to the state.
- Efforts to protect against elder abuse and neglect was another common change. Continuing last year's trend regarding state background checks, two states (Utah and West Virginia) reported updates for background checks of employees.

ESSAY QUESTION

31. The federal and state government regulate assisted living. Give at least five examples of why government regulation is needed and how recent federal and state regulations have improved assisted living.

Answer:

The Assisted Living Workgroup (2003) included the following recommendations regarding resident agreements/contracts within the resident rights component of their report, Assuring Quality in Assisted Living: Guidelines for Federal and State Policy, State Regulations, and Operations, to U.S. Senate Special Committee on Aging:

1. Consistency in contracts and marketing

All information conveyed by an assisted living residence to prospective residents (e.g., marketing materials, sales presentations, and tours) should be consistent with the contract.

2. Contracts and agreements: Consistency with applicable law

All contract provisions shall be consistent with applicable law. The parties may agree to modify the contract as long as all parties agree to the modification and signify their agreement. Such modification will be consistent with applicable law.

3. Contracts and agreements: Readability and pre-signing review

Contracts shall be written in simple language and be understandable. Prior to signature, the prospective resident has the right to review a contract and/or have the contract reviewed by a third party. Prior to the execution of the contract, a representative of the assisted living residence shall offer to read and explain the contract and answer any questions.

4. Contracts and agreements: Required elements

Contracts/agreements should include at a minimum the following information:

- a. The term of the contract
- b. A comprehensive description of the assisted living residence's billing and payment policies and procedures
- c. A comprehensive description of services provided for a basic fee
- d. A comprehensive description of the fee schedule for services provided on an a la carte basis or as part of a tiered pricing system that are not included in a basic fee
- e. The policy for changing the amount of fees
- f. The amount of advance notice the assisted living residence will give before the changing of fees (e.g., 30 days, 60 days). Notices should be readable and understandable by the resident
- g. Whether the assisted living residence requires an entrance fee, security deposit, and/or other fee(s) at entry, the amount of those fees and/or deposits, and the policies for whether or not fees and deposits are refundable, and procedures for refunding those fees and/or deposits
- h. A description of the circumstances under which residents may receive a refund of any prepaid amount such as monthly rent
- i. A description of the assisted living residence's policy during a resident's temporary absence
- j. The process for initial and subsequent assessments and the development of the service plan based on these assessments, including notification that the resident has the right to participate in the development of the service plan
- k. A description of all requirements for assessments or physical examinations, including the frequency and assignment of financial responsibility for such assessments and/or examinations
- l. An explanation of the use of third party services (including all health services), how they may be arranged, accessed and monitored (whether by the resident, family or the assisted living residence), whether transportation is available if the services are not provided on-site, any restrictions on third party services, and who is financially responsible for the third party services and transportation costs
- m. A description of all circumstances and conditions under which the assisted living residence may require the resident to be involuntarily transferred, discharged or evicted, an explanation of the resident's right to notice, the process by which a resident may appeal of the assisted living residence's decision, and a description of the relocation assistance (if available) offered by the assisted living residence
- n. A description of the assisted living residence's process for resolving complaints or disputes, including any appeal rights, and a list of the appropriate consumer/regulatory agencies (if applicable; e.g., appropriate state/local long-term care ombudsman program, the state regulatory agency, the local legal services program, and other advocacy bodies/agencies)
- o. A description of the procedures the resident or assisted living residence shall follow to terminate the agreement
- p. A list of residents' rights as detailed in the statute or regulations governing assisted living residences is incorporated by reference and attached

5. Contracts and agreements: Prohibition on waiver of right to sue

The contract should not require the resident to waive the right to sue the assisted living residence under applicable law. The contract may disclose but not require options for alternative dispute resolution available to the resident or assisted living residence
