After organizing his aunt's closet and one for his cousin, Jamal got the idea of starting his own business cleaning and organizing closets. He could bootstrap the part-time business, working from home and he only needed a small advertising budget which he financed from his savings. Jamal worked for weeks on a business plan and then launched his business, Closet Jewels with an ad campaign in local media. After six months, Jamal still did not have any customers and had received repeated feedback from prospects that while the idea of a clean and organized closet was appealing, the prospect was not willing to pay someone to organize their closet. Jamal closed Closet Jewels after eight months.

Answer Key

Test name: CH01

1) FALSE

The four steps in the entrepreneurial process are feel, check, plan, and do.

2) FALSE

If performing a feasibility study, Kevin is likely at the second step in the entrepreneurial process: check.

3) FALSE

This is one of the myths listed in the text. In actuality, 9 of the 10 most profitable industries for small businesses involve services such as dentists, tax preparers and lawyers.

4) FALSE

Truly entrepreneurial businesses are characterized by novelty, in their products, services, or business models.

5) FALSE

The self-employed, anyone who works for himself or herself instead of for others, is also an entrepreneur.

6) FALSE

This is the definition of crowdfunding, not crowdsourcing.

7) FALSE

This is the definition for a high-growth venture.

8) TRUE

Lifestyle or part-time firms typically have sales of $25,000 a year or less, which provides enough profit or salary to supplement an income but usually not enough on which to live.

9) FALSE

While this is one of the seven key strategies of the entrepreneurial way, it is called the strategy of perseverance not self-efficacy.

10) FALSE

Main street businesses include all types of businesses except high-growth ventures.

11) FALSE

Small businesses employ more than half of all Americans.

12) TRUE

Innovations are far more likely to come from new, small businesses.

13) TRUE

Bootstrapping is using low-cost or free techniques to minimize cost of doing business.

14) FALSE

This is a myth about small-scale businesses. This statement is wrong in two major ways. First, the percentage is wrong, and second, the majority close but don't fail.

15) TRUE

Intention is the desire to start a business and is the most frequently occurring element of the BRIE model.

16) TRUE

Exchange refers to moving resources, goods, or service to others, in exchange for money or other resources.

17) FALSE

Resources is the "R" in the BRIE model.

18) TRUE

Effectuation is used in the "Bird in the hand" strategy where instead of planning a firm and then looking for resources, the entrepreneur first looks at their available resources and thinks about how to use them.

19) TRUE

Without small businesses offering supporting services or offering to subcontract at low cost to the high-growth ventures and big businesses or creating the kinds of communities where creative and entrepreneurial people like to live, the big businesses will not succeed.

20) FALSE

Small businesses offer communities the opportunity to enjoy goods and services, also very important.

21) FALSE

This is the definition for exporting.

22) A

Small Business Administration (SBA) is a part of the U.S. government, which provides support and advocacy for small businesses.

23) C

Truly entrepreneurial businesses are characterized by novelty, in their products, services, or business models.

24) A

Small businesses are imitative in nature, with most small firms doing what other firms do, with only slight variations.

25) D

A franchise is a prepackaged business bought, rented, or leased from a company called a franchisor.

26) C

Heirs are those who inherit or are given a stake in the family business.

27) D

Independent small business is a business owned by an individual or small group.

28) B

A business run by the individual who owns it is referred to as an owner-managed firm.

29) C

For a small business, sales are more important than marketing.

30) B

In small businesses, the preferred source of funding is the owner's own money rather than other people's money.

31) D

In high-growth ventures, the limitation of growth is dictated by market response rather than the owner's loss of control.

32) B

The text uses this definition for a small business.

33) B

The metastrategy of a high-growth venture is novelty.

34) D

This is the definition for self-efficacy.

35) D

A small business grows when necessary, whereas a high-growth venture grows when possible.

36) B

High-growth ventures start small but are intended to grow rapidly.

37) A

Overall growth strategy represents a driver of the variety of entrepreneurship. The overall growth strategy describes the kind of business the owner (or owners) would like to have, from the perspective of how fast and to what level they would like the firm to grow.

38) C

Lifestyle or part-time firms typically have sales of $25,000 a year or less, which provides enough profit or salary to supplement an income but usually not enough on which to live.

39) A

Lifestyle or part-time businesses start and stay very small, often operating seasonally or when the owner wants to work in the business.

40) D

An entrepreneur is a person who owns or starts an organization, such as a business.

41) C

About 53 percent of all small businesses fall into the category of lifetime/part-time firms.

42) B

Traditional small businesses are the smallest full-time businesses.

43) C

A franchise is a type of business but it is not an overall growth strategy as are the other three answer options.

44) A

Seek is not one of the four steps in the entrepreneurial process.

45) C

Pilot testing is performed during the plan step of the entrepreneurial process.

46) B

In traditional small businesses, growth levels off after operations settle into a consistent, money-making pattern, generating enough income to provide a living for the owner and family.

47) C

High-performing small businesses tend to level off after success defined by sales of between $100,000 and $1,000,000, depending on the industry.

48) A

High-performing small businesses often grow through multiple locations.

49) C

Uber and AirBnB are examples of unicorns.

50) A

95 percent of businesses outside of the high-growth sector are what are often called main street businesses and include the lifestyle firms, the traditional small businesses, and the high-performing small businesses.

51) B

Nearly all entrepreneurs talk about three key rewards—flexibility, a livable income, and personal growth.

52) D

Nearly all entrepreneurs talk about three key rewards—flexibility, a livable income, and personal growth.

53) C

There are rewards that entrepreneurs mention less often than working people in general. These are social rewards, like the respect or admiration of others, or power over others, and family rewards, like continuing a family tradition in business.

54) D

The three most popular types of rewards for small business owners are growth, flexibility, and income. Growth rewards are what people get from facing and beating or learning from challenges.

55) C

Income rewards refer to the money made from owning a business. For more than three-quarters of entrepreneurs, this means seeking to match or slightly better the income they had before they started their own business.

56) B

Effectuation is an approach used to create alternatives in uncertain environments.

- 92) High-performing small businesses tend to level off after success defined by sales of between $100,000 and $1,000,000, depending on the industry. These firms grow at rates between 5 and 15 percent a year, maximizing profitability while remaining manageably small. In contrast, high-growth ventures aim to achieve growth rates of 25 percent or more a year, with sales of more than $1 million. These firms aim to become big businesses and pursue high levels of professionalization and external funding. This type of organization includes unicorns that have valuations of $1 billion or more.
- 93) A lifestyle or part-time firm typically has sales of $25,000 a year or less, which provides enough profit to supplement an income but not enough to live on. These businesses start and stay very small, often only operating seasonally or when the owner wants to work at the business. Growth levels off quickly. In contrast, a traditional small business is the smallest full-time business and most are one-site businesses with sales between $25,000 and $100,000. Growth levels off after operations settle into a consistent, money-making pattern, generating enough income to provide a living for the owner and family.
- 94) You could reply that the statement that 90 percent of new businesses fail within two years is wrong in two major ways. First, the percentage is wrong. Studies show that nearly 70 percent of businesses are still going after two years, just over 50 percent are still going in five years, and nearly 35 percent make it past ten years, with 25 percent surviving fifteen years. Second, looking at the businesses that close, the vast majority close but do not fail. Only one firm in three that closes was considered financially unsuccessful by its owner.

95) In order to start a business, four elements must come together—boundary, resources, intention, and exchange. This is referred to as the BRIE model.

A business needs the benefits of a boundary—something that sets it up as a firm. Having a boundary gives a place to locate and protect the resources gathered for the business. Resources include the product or service to be offered, informational resources on markets and running a business, financial resources, and human resources such as the time to devote to the business. Intention is the desire to start a business and is the most frequently occurring element of the BRIE model. Exchange refers to moving resources, goods, or service to others, in exchange for money or other resources. If the firm doesn't exchange with its environment, there is no "business" taking place.

96) Small business has added tens of millions of jobs. In the latest statistics, small businesses created nearly 66 percent of the new jobs created since 2000. Small business start-ups in the first two years of operation accounted for virtually all the net new jobs in America. Small business is the engine of job generation, but it is important for existing jobs, too. Small businesses employ more than half of all Americans, providing wages, salaries, and the taxes those working people pay the government. Small businesses are also key employers because they are more willing than most large businesses to offer jobs to people with atypical work histories or needs, like people new to the workforce, people with uneven employment histories, and people looking for part-time work. These employment issues are at the core of what makes small business attractive to local and state governments.

97) People who own their own business are presented with tremendous opportunities for getting into the economic mainstream of American life, especially attractive to people who have trouble fitting into existing businesses: people with innovative ideas, immigrants, people with restrictive schedules, and even people who need a second chance. Small businesses offer communities another type of opportunity—the opportunity to enjoy goods and services. A small grocery, drugstore, hardware store, or gas station can adapt to local needs while larger chain stores could not. For a small town or neighborhood to stand on its own, it needs a variety of businesses. Finally, small businesses provide unexpected opportunities to large businesses and high-growth firms. Without small businesses offering supporting services or offering to subcontract at low cost to the high-growth ventures and big businesses, those larger companies would lose profitability. In addition, big business depends on small business as a source of key ideas for new products. For both of these reasons, small businesses are vital to the general economy.

98) Closet Jewels did not prosper because customers were nonexistent. Without customers, there is no profit. Jamal started on the entrepreneurial process with the first step—feel. Jamal had success organizing closets and had a feeling about starting a business providing the service to others. What Jamal failed to take action on was step two in the entrepreneurial process—check. Smart entrepreneurs check the likelihood for success of their idea through feasibility analysis or a customer development process, repeating these until they have a winning idea. Jamal did not complete this step and had to discover the answer the hard way, after he had launched the business. Jamal followed step three, plan by making a detailed business plan and even made it to step four, do, by launching the business.

- 99) One approach to exporting that has grown dramatically in the past 15 years is using e-commerce, particularly auction sites like eBay, to handle global trade. The formal title for this is virtual instant global entrepreneurship (VIGE). VIGE depends on using websites like eBay (for products) or Upwork (for services) to quickly establish a global presence. The VIGE site provides the assurance of honesty on the part of buyers and sellers, using rules, warranties, and most of all, mutual ratings of buyers and sellers. Originally, small business was synonymous with local business, but VIGE is changing that notion. Small businesses now account for over 33 percent of the value of all goods and services exported from the United States, and represent nearly 98 percent of all exporting firms.
- 100) The pivot strategy holds that you should go ahead and start the business in any way you can and look for better opportunities as you go along. This approach is also called the corridor principle because until you start going down the corridor (or doing your business) you can't tell what opportunities you might find.
- 101) The three forms of entrepreneurship included in CSI entrepreneurship is: corporate, social, and independent entrepreneurship. Self-employed founders of for-profit firms are involved in what is called independent entrepreneurship. Social entrepreneurships includes founders of not-for-profit organizations or for-profit social ventures, such as charitable and civic organizations. Finally, with corporate entrepreneurship, the focus is typically on bringing a new product or service to market, or opening new markets for your firm.
