Answer Key

Test name: CH01

1) TRUE

Integrated marketing communications (IMC) is the coordination and integration of brand messages from a variety of sources.

2) TRUE

In the past, advertising campaigns were created without much thought to how the ads would work with other marketing communications. Today, advertising is just one element in the marketing communications toolbox and is more effective when guided by a firm's overall integrated marketing communications (IMC) program.

3) FALSE

Advertising promotes tangible goods such as oranges, iPads, and cars, as well as the intangible services of bankers, beauticians, bike repair shops, bill collectors, and bakeries. In this case, a build-it-yourself storage shed kit is an example of a tangible product.

4) TRUE

Advertising reaches us through a channel of communication referred to as a medium. An advertising medium is any nonpersonal means used to present an ad to its target audience.

5) FALSE

Mass media are print or broadcast media that reach very large audiences. They include radio, television, newspapers, magazines, and billboards.

6) FALSE

The ultimate goal of marketing is to earn a profit for the firm by exchanging products or services with those customers who need or want them.

7) FALSE

A firm's marketing strategy will help determine who the targets of advertising should be, in what markets the advertising should appear, and what goals the advertising should accomplish. The advertising strategy, in turn, will refine the target audience and define what response the advertiser is seeking—what that audience should notice, think, and feel.

8) TRUE

Our capitalist economy is based on the notion of free-market competition. While there is no such thing as perfect competition, there are four fundamental assumptions of free-market economics that a market-driven society strives to achieve: self-interest, complete information, many buyers and sellers, and absence of externalities (social costs).

9) TRUE

One of the seven functions and effects of advertising as a marketing tool is to build value, brand preference, and loyalty.

10) TRUE

Advertising has many functions including the communication of information about the product, its features, and its location of sale.

11) FALSE

The preindustrial age was the period of time between the beginning of written history and roughly the start of the nineteenth century; the industrial age lasted roughly from about 1800 until the end of World War II (1945).

12) FALSE

In the American colonies, the Boston Newsletter began carrying ads in 1704. About 25 years later, Benjamin Franklin, the father of advertising art, made ads more readable by using large headlines and considerable white space. In fact, Franklin was the first American known to use illustrations in ads.

13) TRUE

During the industrial age, which lasted roughly until the end of World War II (1945), manufacturers were principally concerned with production.

14) FALSE

For Americans, the profession of advertising began when Volney B. Palmer set up business in Philadelphia in 1841.

15) TRUE

Public schooling helped the nation reach an unparalleled 90 percent literacy rate. Manufacturers gained a large reading public that could understand print ads.

16) FALSE

The golden age of advertising began at the end of World War II and lasted until about 1979.

17) TRUE

Manufacturers following a strategy of product differentiation seek to portray their brands as different from and better than the competition by offering consumers quality, variety, and convenience. In this case, Budweiser wants consumers to believe that its beer is superior to other brands on the market.

18) TRUE

USP (unique selling proposition)—features that differentiate a product from competitive products.

19) FALSE

Manufacturers follow the strategy of product differentiation vigorously, seeking to portray their brands as different from and better than the competition by offering consumers quality, variety, and convenience. Market segmentation involves identifying groups with shared needs and characteristics.

20) TRUE

Positioning involves separating a particular brand from its competitors by associating that brand with a particular set of needs that rank high on the consumer's priority list. In this case, the slogan positions the restaurant as the fastest place to go for gourmet sandwiches.

21) FALSE

During the postindustrial age, demarketing became a more aggressive strategic tool for advertisers to use against competitors, political opponents, and social problems, and it is still used. For example, many organizations today actively seek to demarket the use of tobacco.

22) TRUE

As the U.S. economy slowed during the 1980s, many companies were chasing too few consumer dollars. Clients trimmed their ad budgets, and many turned to more cost-effective sales promotion alternatives, such as coupons, direct mail, and direct marketing to build sales volume.

23) FALSE

Narrowcasting involves delivering programming to a specific group defined by demographics and/or program content, rather than mass appeal. Television offers narrowcasting opportunities especially through cable channels, such as ESPN and HGTV.

24) TRUE

Advertising has been a major factor in improving the standard of living in the United States and around the world.

25) FALSE

During the postindustrial age, demarketing became a more aggressive strategic tool for advertisers to use against competitors, political opponents, and social problems, and it is still used. For example, many organizations today actively seek to demarket the use of tobacco.

47) TRUE

As the U.S. economy slowed during the 1980s, many companies were chasing too few consumer dollars. Clients trimmed their ad budgets, and many turned to more cost-effective sales promotion alternatives, such as coupons, direct mail, and direct marketing to build sales volume.

48) FALSE

Narrowcasting involves delivering programming to a specific group defined by demographics and/or program content, rather than mass appeal. Television offers narrowcasting opportunities especially through cable channels, such as ESPN and HGTV.

49) TRUE

Advertising has been a major factor in improving the standard of living in the United States and around the world.

50) FALSE

In 1906, Congress passed the Pure Food and Drug Act to protect the public's health and control drug advertising. In 1914, it passed the Federal Trade Commission Act to protect the public from unfair business practices, including misleading and deceptive advertising.

51) E

Integrated marketing communications (IMC) is the modern practice of strategically coordinating and integrating brand messages across all consumer contact points. Marketers today know that it is no longer possible to reach and effectively persuade their audiences with traditional media alone—television, radio, magazines, newspapers, direct mail, and outdoor. They need to combine and coordinate those communications tools with public relations, personal selling, sales promotion, and digital media to mount an effective marketing campaign.

52) C

Advertising is a paid, mediated form of communication from an identifiable source, designed to persuade the receiver to take some action, now or in the future.

53) C

Advertising is a paid, mediated form of communication from an identifiable source, designed to persuade the receiver to take some action, now or in the future.

54) E

Advertising is typically directed to groups of people rather than to individuals. It is therefore nonpersonal, or mass, communication.

55) B

Consumers buy products for their own personal use.

Word-of-mouth (WOM) advertising is the passing of information, especially product recommendations, in an informal, unpaid, person-to-person manner, rather than through advertising or other forms of traditional marketing. Although WOM is a communication medium, it has not generally been considered an advertising medium. However, the popularity of social media is forcing advertisers to reconsider this belief.

61) B

Advertising reaches us through channels of communication referred to as media (the plural of medium). An advertising medium is any nonpersonal means used to present an ad to its target audience.

62) D

Of all the business functions, marketing is the only one whose primary role is to bring in revenue.

63) E

Marketing is the activity, set of institutions, and processes for creating, communicating, delivering, and exchanging offerings that have value for customers, clients, partners, and society at large.

64) A

The marketing mix is typically broken down into the 4Ps: developing products, pricing them strategically, distributing them so they are available to customers at appropriate places, and promoting them through sales and advertising activities.

65) A

Advertising helps the organization achieve its marketing goals. The marketing strategy will help determine who the targets of advertising should be, in what markets the advertising should appear, and what goals the advertising should accomplish. The advertising strategy, in turn, will refine the target audience and define what response the advertiser is seeking—what that audience should notice, think, and feel.

66) C

Economics has driven the growth of advertising since its earliest beginnings and has made it one of the hallmarks of the free enterprise system.

67) D

People and organizations tend to act in their own self-interest. People always want more—for less.

Newspapers, magazines, radio, television, and many websites all receive their primary income from advertising. This facilitates freedom of the press and promotes more complete information.

- 163) Integrated marketing communications (IMC) is the coordination and integration of messages from a variety of sources. Marketers today realize that it is no longer possible to reach and effectively persuade their audiences with traditional media alone—television, radio, magazines, newspapers, direct mail, and outdoor. Instead, they must combine and coordinate their use of traditional media, public relations, personal selling, sales promotion, and digital media to mount an effective marketing campaign.
- 164) Advertising is a paid, mediated form of communication from an identifiable source, designed to persuade the receiver to take some action, now or in the future.
- 165) Marketing is an organizational function and a set of processes for creating, communicating, and delivering value to customers and for managing customer relationships in ways that benefit the organization and its stakeholders.

- 166) The 4Ps of the marketing mix are developing products, pricing them strategically, distributing them so they are available to customers at appropriate places, and promoting them through sales and advertising activities.
- 167) The more information buyers and sellers have about what products are available, at what quality, and at what prices, the more efficient the competition. The outcome is better quality products and lower prices for all.
- 168) There are four fundamental assumptions of free-market economics that a market-driven society strives to achieve. These are self-interest, complete information, many buyers and sellers, and the absence of externalities (social costs).
- 169) One of the most basic functions of branding, as well as of advertising, is to identify products and their source and to differentiate them from others.
- 170) The technological advances of the Industrial Revolution enabled great changes in advertising. Photography, introduced in 1839, added credibility and a new world of creativity. It allowed ads to show products, people, and places as they really were, rather than how an illustrator visualized them. The telegraph, telephone, typewriter, phonograph, and later, films, all let people communicate as never before.
- 171) In the 1440s, Johannes Gutenberg invented the printing press in Germany. The press was an important development in the history of advertising, and indeed communication, and it revolutionized the way people lived and worked.

- 172) In 1869, Francis Ayer formed an ad agency in Philadelphia. N. W. Ayer & Sons was the first agency to charge a commission based on the "net cost of space" and the first to conduct a formal market survey.
- 173) Advertising helps an organization achieve its marketing goals. Marketing functions such as marketing research have an impact on the type of advertising a company employs. Companies and organizations use many different types of advertising, depending on their particular marketing strategy. The marketing strategy will determine who the targets of advertising are, where the advertising should appear, what media should be used, and what purposes the advertising should accomplish.
- 174) Marketing strategy is the statement of how the company is going to accomplish its marketing objectives. It will help determine who the targets of advertising should be, in what markets the advertising should appear, and what goals the advertising should accomplish. The advertising objective declares what the advertiser wants to achieve with respect to consumer awareness, attitude, and preference; the advertising strategy describes how to get there. Advertising strategy consists of two substrategies: the creative strategy and the media strategy.

175) Capitalism is based on the notion of free-market competition. While there is no such thing as perfect competition, there are four fundamental assumptions of free-market economics that a market-driven society strives to achieve: (1) Self-interest. People and organizations tend to act in their own self-interest. They always want more—for less. (2) Completeinformation. Complete information about products leads to greater competition and lower prices. (3) Many buyers and sellers. Having a wide range of sellers ensures that if one company does not meet customer needs, another will capitalize on the situationby producing a more market-responsive product. Having a wide range of buyers ensures that sellers can find customers who are interested in the unique products they are able to produce at a fair price. (4) Absence of externalities (social costs). Sometimesthe sale or consumption of products may benefit or harm other people who were not involved in the transaction. The governmentuses taxes and regulations to eliminate the externalities when this occurs.

176) The most basic function of branding is to identify products and their sources and to differentiate them from others. Coca-Cola created a clear identity with its distinctive logo and bottle shape. Over the company's history, its advertising has always promoted a common voice and a common theme: "Coca-Cola makes life's relaxing moments even better."

177) The preindustrial age began with the beginning of recorded history and ran until the early 1800s. During this time, most human activity was devoted to meeting basic survival needs. Distribution was limited to how far vendors could walk and advertising was how loud they could shout. Over time, the development of literacy, inventions such as the printing press, and the spread of trade away from local producers encouraged the development of advertising. Developments such as print ads spread advertising to wider audiences. Benjamin Franklin introduced the use of illustrations.

178) Manufacturers were mainly concerned with production. The primary marketing burden fell on wholesalers and large mail-order catalog companies like Montgomery Ward and Sears Roebuck. Only a few innovative manufacturers foresaw the usefulness of mass media advertising to stimulate consumer demand for their products.

179) The industrial age ran from the late 1700s (when the Industrial Revolution began in England) to around the middle of the 1900s. The Industrial Revolution reached the United States in the early 1800s. Significant events of this age that could be discussed include the early use of machinery, how population increased, how literacy rates increased, the power of the wholesaler in the distribution channel, how the profession of advertising grew, how early advertising agencies functioned, and how communication devices changed the way advertising was received. In addition, technologies such as the telegraph, telephone, typewriter, phonograph, and films all helped people communicate as never before.

- 180) Public schooling helped the nation reach an unparalleled 90 percent literacy rate. Manufacturers gained a large reading public that could understand print ads. The United States thus entered the twentieth century as a great industrial state with a national marketing system propelled by advertising.
- 181) During the postwar prosperity of the late 1940s and early 1950s, consumers tried to climb the social ladder by buying more and more modern products. Advertising entered its golden era. A creative revolution ensued in which ads focused on product features that implied social acceptance, style, luxury, and success. Rosser Reeves of the Ted Bates Agency introduced the idea that every ad must point out the product's unique selling proposition (USP)—features that would differentiate it from competitive products. The USP was a logical extension of the Lasker and Hopkins "reason why" credo. But as the USP was used over and over, consumers started finding it difficult to see what was unique anymore.
- 182) By publicizing the material, social, and cultural opportunities of a free enterprise society, advertising has encouraged increased productivity in both management and labor. Besides facilitating sales, advertising has also fostered freedom of the press. Print and broadcast media all receive the majority of their income from advertising. Through PSAs, advertising has provided Americans with important information about social issues.

- 183) Integrated marketing communications (IMC) is the coordination and integration of messages from a variety of sources. Marketers today realize that it is no longer possible to reach and effectively persuade their audiences with traditional media alone—television, radio, magazines, newspapers, direct mail, and outdoor. Instead, they must combine and coordinate their use of traditional media, public relations, personal selling, sales promotion, and digital media to mount an effective marketing campaign.
- 184) Advertising is a paid, mediated form of communication from an identifiable source, designed to persuade the receiver to take some action, now or in the future.
- 185) Marketing is an organizational function and a set of processes for creating, communicating, and delivering value to customers and for managing customer relationships in ways that benefit the organization and its stakeholders.
- 186) The 4Ps of the marketing mix are developing products, pricing them strategically, distributing them so they are available to customers at appropriate places, and promoting them through sales and advertising activities.

It allowed ads to show products, people, and places as they really were, rather than how an illustrator visualized them. The telegraph, telephone, typewriter, phonograph, and later, films, all let people communicate as never before.
- 191) In the 1440s, Johannes Gutenberg invented the printing press in Germany. The press was an important development in the history of advertising, and indeed communication, and it revolutionized the way people lived and worked.
- 192) In 1869, Francis Ayer formed an ad agency in Philadelphia. N. W. Ayer & Sons was the first agency to charge a commission based on the "net cost of space" and the first to conduct a formal market survey.
- 193) Advertising helps an organization achieve its marketing goals. Marketing functions such as marketing research have an impact on the type of advertising a company employs. Companies and organizations use many different types of advertising, depending on their particular marketing strategy. The marketing strategy will determine who the targets of advertising are, where the advertising should appear, what media should be used, and what purposes the advertising should accomplish.

- 194) Marketing strategy is the statement of how the company is going to accomplish its marketing objectives. It will help determine who the targets of advertising should be, in what markets the advertising should appear, and what goals the advertising should accomplish. The advertising objective declares what the advertiser wants to achieve with respect to consumer awareness, attitude, and preference; the advertising strategy describes how to get there. Advertising strategy consists of two substrategies: the creative strategy and the media strategy.
- 195) Capitalism is based on the notion of free-market competition. While there is no such thing as perfect competition, there are four fundamental assumptions of free-market economics that a market-driven society strives to achieve: (1) Self-interest. People and organizations tend to act in their own self-interest. They always want more—for less. (2) Completeinformation. Complete information about products leads to greater competition and lower prices. (3) Many buyers and sellers. Having a wide range of sellers ensures that if one company does not meet customer needs, another will capitalize on the situationby producing a more market-responsive product. Having a wide range of buyers ensures that sellers can find customers who are interested in the unique products they are able to produce at a fair price. (4) Absence of externalities (social costs). Sometimesthe sale or consumption of products may benefit or harm other people who were not involved in the transaction. The governmentuses taxes and regulations to eliminate the externalities when this occurs.
- 196) The most basic function of branding is to identify products and their sources and to differentiate them from others. Coca-Cola created a clear identity with its distinctive logo and bottle shape. Over the company's history, its advertising has always promoted a common voice and a common theme: "Coca-Cola makes life's relaxing moments even better."

197) The preindustrial age began with the beginning of recorded history and ran until the early 1800s. During this time, most human activity was devoted to meeting basic survival needs. Distribution was limited to how far vendors could walk and advertising was how loud they could shout. Over time, the development of literacy, inventions such as the printing press, and the spread of trade away from local producers encouraged the development of advertising. Developments such as print ads spread advertising to wider audiences. Benjamin Franklin introduced the use of illustrations.

198) Manufacturers were mainly concerned with production. The primary marketing burden fell on wholesalers and large mail-order catalog companies like Montgomery Ward and Sears Roebuck. Only a few innovative manufacturers foresaw the usefulness of mass media advertising to stimulate consumer demand for their products.

199) The industrial age ran from the late 1700s (when the Industrial Revolution began in England) to around the middle of the 1900s. The Industrial Revolution reached the United States in the early 1800s. Significant events of this age that could be discussed include the early use of machinery, how population increased, how literacy rates increased, the power of the wholesaler in the distribution channel, how the profession of advertising grew, how early advertising agencies functioned, and how communication devices changed the way advertising was received. In addition, technologies such as the telegraph, telephone, typewriter, phonograph, and films all helped people communicate as never before.

200) Public schooling helped the nation reach an unparalleled 90 percent literacy rate. Manufacturers gained a large reading public that could understand print ads. The United States thus entered the twentieth century as a great industrial state with a national marketing system propelled by advertising.

201) During the postwar prosperity of the late 1940s and early 1950s, consumers tried to climb the social ladder by buying more and more modern products. Advertising entered its golden era. A creative revolution ensued in which ads focused on product features that implied social acceptance, style, luxury, and success. Rosser Reeves of the Ted Bates Agency introduced the idea that every ad must point out the product's unique selling proposition (USP)—features that would differentiate it from competitive products. The USP was a logical extension of the Lasker and Hopkins "reason why" credo. But as the USP was used over and over, consumers started finding it difficult to see what was unique anymore.

202) By publicizing the material, social, and cultural opportunities of a free enterprise society, advertising has encouraged increased productivity in both management and labor. Besides facilitating sales, advertising has also fostered freedom of the press. Print and broadcast media all receive the majority of their income from advertising. Through PSAs, advertising has provided Americans with important information about social issues.
