Answer Key

Test name: CH01

1) FALSE

The evidence of the importance of entrepreneurial businesses to the U.S. economy can be seen in statistics from the United States Small Business Administration (SBA).

2) TRUE

The United States Small Business Administration (SBA) provides a wealth of information and assistance at all levels of organizational development and management for new entrepreneurial businesses. It is the agency officially organized in 1953 as a part of the Small Business Act of July 30, 1953, to "aid, counsel, assist, and protect, insofar as is possible, the interests of small business concerns."

3) TRUE

One of the three critical elements that an entrepreneur has to solve for success is the ability to generate consistent and growing sales. The other critical elements are having sustainable operating profit margins and being properly financed.

4) TRUE

One of the three critical elements that an entrepreneur has to solve for success is sustainable operating profit margins. Profit margins are key to successful businesses.

Entrepreneurship 4th Edition by Bamford CH01

The Fortune 500 is published every year by Fortune magazine and documents the 500 largest corporations (by sales) in the United States. Every business in this list was started out as a new venture by a single individual or a small group of people.

6) FALSE

Economies of scale is a condition that allows the long-run average cost to continue downward as production increases. It can lead to a condition where a single firm making 100 percent of the product is the most efficient.

7) FALSE

Entrepreneurial businesses are not burdened with organizational policies and procedures.

8) TRUE

Alexis de Tocqueville was a Frenchman who toured the United States in the early 1830s and wrote a famous analysis of the country. One of his observations was that the United States was not so much a nation with ventures that were marvelous in their grandeur, but instead, a nation of innumerable small ventures.

9) TRUE

After World War II, Charles Wilson, secretary of defense for President Eisenhower, made the famous statement that "what is good for General Motors is good for the nation." The implication was that what was good for big business would be good for all of the people in the country.

10) FALSE

Entrepreneurship 4th Edition by Bamford CH01

In the late 1970s and early 1980s, the nation was in economic turmoil as many of the large firms that had grown to dominate the U.S. economy were having difficulty owing to global competition. The Japanese were in the dominant economic position in the world, and the widely discussed fear was that the United States was in decline much as Britain had been 100 years earlier.

11) TRUE

The Great Depression of the 1930s was harder on entrepreneurial businesses than on larger more mature businesses, and as a result, it encouraged industrial concentration.

12) TRUE

Today, many of the multinational firms in the United States are technology firms that began in the late 1970s and early 1980s. The vast number of businesses that start up each year are responsible for much of the innovation that pushes established companies to new levels.

13) TRUE

It was more difficult for entrepreneurial businesses to survive during the Great Depression of the 1930s. This encouraged industrial concentration.

14) FALSE

One of the huge advantages of starting one's own business is that it provides the setting where the business owner can be the boss.

15) TRUE

Stakeholders include key suppliers, customers, and employees—all of whom are critical to the success of the new business. These are individuals or other organizations that may impact the success of the business and depend on the success of the business for their own livelihood.

Entrepreneurship 4th Edition by Bamford CH01

16) FALSE

In their book entitled The Millionaire Next Door, Thomas Stanley and William Danko highlight statistics that demonstrate the potential for financial rewards from starting a business. For example, they point out that that 75 percent of these self-employed millionaires are entrepreneurs; the other 25 percent are self-employed professionals, such as doctors and accountants.

17) TRUE

In their book entitled The Millionaire Next Door, Thomas Stanley and William Danko highlight statistics that demonstrate the potential for financial rewards from starting a business. For example, they point out that almost two-thirds of U.S. millionaires are self-employed, despite the fact that self-employed people make up fewer than 20 percent of the workers in America.

18) TRUE

The time line of business provides both constants and natural evolution.

19) TRUE

Close to 50 percent of the millionaires in this country are entrepreneurs. These are the individuals who start a business, run it well, and over time build their financial success.

20) FALSE

Entrepreneurial businesses provide more than just jobs; they also provide a means to meet the varied demands that individuals face in a society.

21) FALSE

It is simply not true that success in an entrepreneurial business can only be achieved with brutally hard and long hours. Many entrepreneurs make a very good living working limited numbers of hours each week.

Entrepreneurship 4th Edition by Bamford CH01

22) TRUE

Entrepreneurial businesses act as a catalyst for societal change. They have the ability to garner profits in markets that have been ignored by larger corporations.

23) FALSE

The owners and employees of entrepreneurial businesses have an understanding of the local community not easily obtained by a large conglomerate.

24) TRUE

The federal General Accounting Office found that in cities with base closings including Salt Lake City, Kansas City, and San Jose, the areas around the bases had unemployment rates lower than the national average and income growth higher than the national average. There had been large initial job losses in these communities; however, the state and community leaders had responded to the closing of the bases with tax breaks and programs to support the development of new businesses.

25) TRUE

Ms. Schuck is a classic example of how one can make achievements in many facets of life.

26) TRUE

Today, there are widespread efforts in almost all nations to encourage the development of small and medium enterprises.

27) FALSE

Microloans are often for only a few dollars each and are made directly to entrepreneurs, often women. It is interesting that the repayment rate on such loans is typically 99 to 100 percent, a much higher repayment rate than on most types of loans.

Entrepreneurship 4th Edition by Bamford CH01

28) FALSE

Venture capitalists are a specialized type of investor. They typically do not invest less than $2 million, and in return, they expect extraordinary returns.

29) FALSE

An entrepreneurial firm is oriented toward the personal goals of the founder(s). The number of employees may be zero or as few as one and typically would not be expected to grow to more than 50 to 100.

30) TRUE

The presence of venture capital for start-ups is limited outside of the United States. Often even funds that say they are venture capitalists are in fact only providing funding for mezzanine or mature, existing firms that are looking to expand.

31) FALSE

The development plan of an entrepreneurial firm is oriented around positive cash flow. The operation of the business is designed in the image of the founder(s).

32) TRUE

For classification purposes, the U.S. government considers any business with fewer than 500 employees to be a small business.

33) FALSE

A small business's harvest plan is to exit the business. Typically, the owners have the intention to sell the business to another firm or take it to an initial public offering of stock (IPO).

34) FALSE

As a result of harvest plans, firms are organized to grow as quickly as possible and are generally heavily laden with debt.

Entrepreneurship 4th Edition by Bamford CH01

35) TRUE

Small business start-ups are most often referred to as entrepreneurial firms and characterized by being self-funded or closely funded by the founder.

36) TRUE

Small business start-ups are most often referred to as entrepreneurial firms and characterized by a management structure designed to take advantage of the skills of the founder or founders.

37) FALSE

These firms are most often referred to as entrepreneurial firms and characterized by the operation being designed in the image of the founders.

38) TRUE

Although Facebook, or even LinkedIn, was founded as an entrepreneurial business, it would be more accurate to describe either of them as a venture capital-backed business since both quickly required millions of dollars of investment from venture capitalists to grow.

39) FALSE

An entrepreneurial business's resources are significantly more constrained than those of a venture capital-backed business.

40) TRUE

Each business plan, much like each business, should have its own voice, feel, and presentation.

41) TRUE

A well-thought-out business plan has heightened importance for a new business as a tool for you to think through a wide range of issues.

It is better to keep the length of the business plan for a small business between 15 to 25 pages.

43) D

Economies of scale is the term used to describe Walmart's ability to purchase more advertising space at a lower cost per ad. Advertising is typically much cheaper per unit if purchased in large volume.

44) A

The ability of entrepreneurs to respond more quickly and to operate more effectively has led to a growth in the raw number of entrepreneurial businesses rather than a decline.

45) D

The development and implementation of a new business is part art and part science. This field has been studied for a long time and there is a well-developed body of knowledge available for students.

46) D

Research has found that there are three critical elements that an entrepreneur must solve for success: having an effective sales generation model, having sustainable operating profit margins, and being properly financed.

47) A

Many years ago, the apparent efficiencies of very large businesses led some economists to predict that small businesses would be largely replaced by a much smaller number of large businesses.

Entrepreneurship 4th Edition by Bamford CH01

Development and implementation of a new business is part art and part science; the science is the forming and managing of a new entrepreneurial business in a clear, sequential manner, and the art is a matter of practice, example, and the skill of the founder(s) of the new business.

49) A

The United States Small Business Administration (SBA) is the agency officially organized to aid, counsel, assist, and protect, insofar as is possible, the interests of small business concerns.

50) A

One of the huge advantages of starting one's own business is that it provides the setting where the business owner can be the boss.

51) B

The SBA is the agency officially organized in 1953 as a part of the Small Business Act of July 30, 1953, to "aid, counsel, assist, and protect, insofar as is possible, the interests of small business concerns."

52) C

Economies of scale is a condition that allows the long-run average cost to continue downward as production increases. It leads to a condition where a single firm making 100 percent of the product is the most efficient.

53) A

The success of entrepreneurial businesses occurs partially because they are simply more focused than their large corporate counterparts. Without the burden of policies, procedures, corporate layers of management, and public stockholders, new businesses are free to put all their energy into satisfying the needs of their customers.

Robber barons took advantage of the economies of scale that were suddenly possible with the industrial age and quickly came to dominate new sectors of the economy (e.g., Andrew Carnegie's domination of the steel industry). However, the robber barons were coming to dominate industrial sectors that had not existed historically, so they generally did not put smaller operations out of business.

55) A

The history of the United States has always been intimately tied to entrepreneurial businesses. Until the mid-1880s, almost all U.S. businesses were still relatively small.

Entrepreneurship 4th Edition by Bamford CH01

The Great Depression of the 1930s was harder on entrepreneurial businesses than on larger more mature businesses, and as a result it encouraged industrial concentration. The outcome was that following World War II, entrepreneurial business as a percentage of the U.S. economic output began to decline.

60) D

Robber barons came into existence in the 1880s with the development of the nation's large industrial base. They are not only associated with tremendous success but also great abuses in business.

61) C

Stakeholders are individuals or other organizations that impact the success of a business.

Individuals can become frustrated with large corporations over the lack of promotion opportunities or the inflexibility of the corporations in dealing with the needs of family and children.

66) B

Large organizations will regularly ignore business opportunities if they do not believe the results will generate high profits, whereas entrepreneurial businesses are more flexible and willing to pursue a wider range of opportunities. The owners and employees of the entrepreneurial businesses have an understanding of the local community not easily obtained by a large conglomerate.

67) C

The term "glass ceiling" refers to the fact that women, like minorities, may be hired by large firms but experience limits placed on their advancement. As a result, these women leave the large firms and start their own businesses.

68) A

Small businesses act as a catalyst for societal change in many ways. Small businesses make profit in markets that have been ignored by large companies and they are more flexible and willing to pursue a wider range of opportunities.

69) C

The number of women starting new businesses has increased to the point where they are now the largest single group of new business founders.

70) A

The growth of women entrepreneurs comes from the fact that women are frustrated by the "glass ceiling" and want greater control of their lives so they can better balance their family's and children's needs.

The World Bank estimates that one of the strongest factors in the growth of any nation's gross national product is the presence of small and medium-sized enterprises.

72) D

The success of microloans has been substantial, with great strides being made in many desperately poor nations. It is interesting that the repayment rate on such loans is typically 99 to 100 percent, a much higher repayment rate than on most types of loans.

73) B

Microloan programs have been in existence for years to encourage self-development. These loans are often for only a few dollars each and are made directly to entrepreneurs, often women.

74) A

Microloans often amount to few dollars each. The businesses founded through these loans can be as simple as delivering lunches, weaving baskets, or washing clothes.

75) D

Characteristics of entrepreneurial business start-ups include being self-funded or closely funded; a development plan oriented around positive cash flow; a management structure designed to take advantage of the skills of the founder or founders; an operation designed in the image of the founder(s); a business oriented toward the personal goals of the founder(s); and the number of employees being zero or as few as one and typically not expected to grow to more than 50 to 100.

81) D

A well-thought-out business plan has heightened importance for a new business. You should not use a cookie-cutter business plan program because each business plan should have its own voice, feel, and presentation. It is best developed by the individual contemplating the business, not by a paid consultant. Potential investors are often family members, which makes it critical that the entrepreneur seeks to ensure the chances of success by doing thorough planning and thinking.

Venture capital start-ups are well-funded by venture capital or angel investment. In fact, without such capital it is virtually impossible to begin this particular type of venture.

83) B

Venture capital start-ups tend to develop operations in multiple locations very shortly after the initial investment. They are inherently risky operations whose growth is dependent on the exploitation of unknowns in the market (a new invention, unique patents, etc.).

84) C

Entrepreneurial firms are oriented toward the personal goals of the founder(s). The operation in such firms is designed in the image of the founder(s).

85) D

86) C

A harvest plan may include selling the business to another firm, selling it to a group of investors, or even participating in an IPO (an initial public offering of stock). Size is the deciding metric in a potential public offering or sale to a larger organization.

87) A

The U.S. Census tracks employment by number of employees (among many other statistics), and the latest census reports indicate that firms with fewer than 99 employees represent 76 percent of all firms in the United States. They also represent approximately 33 percent of all full-time employees in the United States.

96) lean

The term "lean start-up" specifies that a start-up business will need to rapidly change.

97) The evidence of entrepreneurial businesses' importance to the economy can be seen in the following 2019 statistics from the United States Small Business Administration (SBA):

- 1) 99.9 percent of all businesses in the United States are small.
- 2) 48 percent of private sector employees are in small businesses (60 million out of 126.8 million employees in the United States).
- 3) 33.3 percent of known export value are from small businesses ($29 billion out of $1.3 trillion).

Furthermore, these entrepreneurial businesses are growing rapidly. Small businesses created 9.6 million net new jobs from 2000 to 2018 or just under 65 percent of net new job creation in the United States. Large businesses were responsible for just 5.2 million.

98) Economies of scale is a condition that allows the long-run average cost to continue downward as production increases. It leads (in its most extreme case) to a condition where a single firm making 100 percent of the product is the most efficient. In reality, this condition is moderated by the ability of management to adjust the size. Large firms can obtain economies of scale in some industries. In other words, large firms can sometimes do things more efficiently because of their ability to operate on a larger scale than can a small firm.

99) In the late 1970s and early 1980s, the United States was in economic turmoil. Many of the large firms that dominated the U.S. economy were facing difficulties due to global competition. The decline opened new opportunities for entrepreneurial businesses. The economic growth and success that the nation experiences today can be attributed to the entrepreneurial firms that began in the 1970s and 80s.

100) Stakeholders are individuals or other organizations that may impact the success of a business and depend on the success of the business for their own livelihood. They include key suppliers, customers, and employees—all of whom are critical to the success of the new business.

101) A small business has the ability to garner profits in the markets that have been ignored by large firms. Small businesses have more flexibility to understand the local community. The increase of women and minorities starting new businesses contributes to societal change. Women are now the largest single group of new business founders.

102) New and growing businesses are critically important around the world. The World Bank estimates that one of the strongest factors in the growth in any nation's gross national product (GNP) is the presence of entrepreneurial small- and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs). Today there are widespread efforts in almost all nations to encourage the development of small and medium enterprises. These governmental efforts range from tiny contributions of capital or time to large, multidimensional programs that cross the boundaries of multiple nations.

103) For classification purposes, the U.S. government considers any business with fewer than 500 employees to be a small business, while the European Union caps that number at 50. A business with almost 500 employees is actually a large firm requiring formal personnel policies, specialized services, and an administrative structure that is in no way close to the reality of most small businesses. For the vast majority of people, the businesses formed will have far fewer than 500 employees.

104) Venture capital start-ups can be characterized by the following descriptions:

1. The businesses are well-funded by venture capital or angel investment. In fact, without such capital, it is virtually impossible to begin this particular type of venture. Venture capitalists are a specialized type of investor; they typically do not invest less than $2 million and in return they expect extraordinary returns.
2. These businesses are formed with a harvest plan in place; this is a plan to exit the business that allows the investors to take advantage of growth. A harvest plan may include selling the business to another firm, selling it to a group of investors, or even participating in an IPO (an initial public offering of stock). Size is the deciding metric in a potential public offering or sale to a larger organization.
3. As a result of the harvest plan, these firms are organized to grow as quickly as possible and are generally heavily laden with debt. Many are harvested before they can achieve positive net cash flow.
4. They have a developed organizational structure.
5. They often hire an experienced president to grow the company.
6. They tend to develop operations in multiple locations very shortly after the initial investment.
7. They are inherently risky operations whose growth is dependent on the exploitation of unknowns in the market (a new invention, unique patents, etc.).
8. These businesses either start or grow quickly to employ a relatively large number of employees.

105) Entrepreneurial businesses can be characterized by the following descriptions:

1. The start-up is self-funded or funded by those close to them.
2. The development plan is oriented around positive cash flow.
3. The management structure is designed to take advantage of the skills of the founder or founders.
4. The operation is designed in the image of the founder(s).
5. The business is oriented toward the personal goals of the founder(s).
6. The number of employees may be zero or as few as one and typically would not be expected to grow to more than 50 to 100.

106) A critical difference between an entrepreneurial business and a venture capital-backed firm is in the size and detail required in their initial business plans. An entrepreneurial business's resources are significantly more constrained than those of a venture capital-backed business. Whereas the venture capital-backed firm generally develops a business plan as a promotional tool to be sent to potential investors, the entrepreneurial business develops a business plan as a guide for the running of the business. Many ventures seeking capital hire professional consultants to assist them in the development of their business plans.

107) A business plan for a new entrepreneurial business is developed with three goals in mind:

1. To be a guide to managing the business in its early development.
2. To provide a self-evaluation: Putting the information down in writing allows for evaluation and honest analysis.
3. To provide potential closely held investors with the critical information necessary to evaluate the key criteria of the business: its cash flow, management team, and competitive advantage.

108) The term "lean start-up" indicates that a start-up business will need to rapidly change. Rather than pursuing a fixed business idea you should visualize the start-up as an experiment. The focus is on building a business that generates something that the customer that is an early adopter actually desires. The lean approach means seeking a model that is scalable—or able to build into something bigger. The lean start-up seeks to shorten the product/service cycles by quickly testing and experimentation of a product. The goal of the lean approach to business start-up seeks to iteratively build products or services with a particular focus on early customers. This process requires constantly testing the business's products/services with real customers and incorporating their feedback into the entrepreneurial effort. One key to the lean entrepreneurial process and where the term originates is the start-up must be lean. To make changes an entrepreneur must be flexible. Thus, the entrepreneur must recognize that change will be the nature of the business, and so whether such an investment is helpful or confining must be evaluated by the entrepreneur. The key for the entrepreneur is the adaptation. Keeping any production or action simple can quickly be eliminated if it does not generate the success the entrepreneurial team is seeking.

109) There is a limited presence of venture capital for start-ups outside of the United States. Most funds are available only for mezzanine or mature, existing firms that are looking to expand.
