Answer Key

Test name: CH01

1) FALSE

2) FALSE

3) TRUE

One of the functions of a supervisor includes planning. Planning involves setting department goals and determining how to meet them.

4) FALSE

Supervisors are responsible for executing the duties assigned to them by higher-level managers. They must give managers timely and accurate information for planning. They also must provide managers updates about the department's performance.

5) TRUE

One of the important responsibilities of supervisors is to coordinate with coworkers in other departments. They should respond promptly when a coworker in another department requests information. They should share ideas that will help the organization's departments work together to accomplish common goals.

6) TRUE

7) TRUE

8) D

A supervisor is a manager at the first level of management, which means the employees reporting to the supervisor are not managers.

9) B

Supervision Concepts and Skill Building 11th Edition by Certo CH01

The Taft-Hartley Act states that a supervisor is “any individual having authority, in the interest of the employer, to hire, transfer, suspend, lay off, recall, promote, discharge, assign, reward or discipline other employees, or responsibility to direct them, or to adjust their grievances, or effectively to recommend such action, if in connection with the foregoing the exercise of such authority is not of a merely routine or clerical nature, but requires the use of independent judgment.”

10) C

In this scenario, Debra is a supervisor. A supervisor is a manager at the first level of management. This means the employees who report to the supervisor are not managers.

11) B

Managing at the supervisory level means ensuring that the employees in a particular department are performing their jobs so that the department will contribute its share to accomplishing the organization’s goals. Usually, supervisors focus on day-to-day problems and goals to be achieved in one year or less.

12) A

A supervisor’s main task is to improve the efficiency of work to achieve a department’s goals. A supervisor must focus on efficiency, functions to be performed, and people.

13) B

According to Abraham Maslow’s hierarchical pattern of needs, the most basic needs of any human being are physiological needs, such as food and shelter.

According to Abraham Maslow's hierarchical pattern of needs, the final part of the hierarchy includes self-actualization, which includes an attitude of acceptance, a lack of racial biases, and creativity.

15) B

Henri Fayol, a French industrialist, is often regarded as the pioneer of administrative theory. The ideas that he generated relative to general management principles are still considered to be important among contemporary thinkers.

16) A

Frederick W. Taylor is often referred to as the "father of scientific management." Taylor believed that in order to improve efficiency, it is important to consider the best way in which a job could be completed.

17) A

According to Maslow's hierarchy of needs, the self-actualization stage includes an attitude of acceptance, a lack of racial biases, and creativity.

18) C

Abraham Maslow recognized that people have different sets of needs that are met in a hierarchical pattern. Based upon Maslow's findings, supervisors must help workers to satisfy their personal needs while being productive in organizations.

19) D

Because they deal directly with employees and have knowledge about an organization's customers, supervisors emphasize a people orientation. This focus recognizes that the quality of an organization is often affected by the quality of interactions among its members.

In the context of the modern view of management skills, sustainability refers to a business's ability to operate with minimal impact on the environment.

21) C

Conceptual skills involve the ability to see the relationship of the parts to the whole and to one another. For a supervisor, conceptual skills include recognizing how a department's work helps the entire organization achieve its goals and how the work of various employees affects the performance of the department as a whole.

22) D

Mary knows the procedures and techniques of sewing, which are technical skills. Technical skills are the specialized knowledge and expertise used to carry out particular techniques or procedures.

23) A

For a supervisor, conceptual skills include recognizing how a department's work helps an entire organization achieve its goals and how the work of various employees affects the performance of the department as a whole.

24) B

The degree to which technical skills, conceptual skills, and decision-making skills are required varies with the level of management. Human relations skills, however, are almost equally significant at all levels of management.

25) D

Supervisors rely more on technical skills than do higher-level managers because employees who have a problem doing their jobs go to the supervisor and expect help.

26) D

In the context of important managerial skills, the external monitoring set of skills requires the ability to analyze information about events, trends, and changes in the external environment to identify threats and opportunities for a work unit.

27) A

Monitoring operations primarily involves checking on the progress and quality of the work and evaluating individual and unit performance.

28) A

Consulting primarily involves checking with people before making decisions that affect them, encouraging participation in decision making, and using the ideas and suggestions of others.

29) B

In the context of skills of successful managers, supporting requires being considerate, showing sympathy and support when someone is upset or anxious, and providing encouragement and support when a task is difficult or stressful.

30) D

Recognizing involves providing praise and recognition for effective performance, significant achievements, special contributions, and performance improvements.

31) D

Alan is utilizing his developing skills. Developing is a skill that successful managers should possess. It involves providing coaching and advice, providing opportunities for skill development, and helping people learn how to improve their skills.

In the context of skills of successful managers, empowering involves allowing substantial responsibility and discretion in work activities and trusting people to solve problems and make decisions without getting approval first.

In the context of skills of successful managers, envisioning change involves presenting an appealing description of desirable outcomes that the unit can achieve and describing a proposed change with enthusiasm and conviction.

34) B

In the context of skills of successful managers, making sacrifices to encourage and promote desired outcomes in an organization is part of taking risks for change.

35) C

In the context of skills of successful managers, encouraging innovative thinking involves challenging people to question their assumptions about the work and consider better ways of doing it.

36) D

Task-related activities are efforts to carry out critical management-related duties, such as planning, setting objectives for employees, and monitoring performance.

37) C

People-related activities involve efforts to manage people, such as by providing support and encouragement, recognizing contributions, developing employees' skills, and empowering employees to solve problems.

38) D

Supervision Concepts and Skill Building 11th Edition by Certo CH01

Change-related activities involve efforts to modify components of the organization, such as monitoring the environment to detect a need for change, proposing new tactics and strategies, encouraging others to think creatively, and taking risks to promote needed changes.

39) B

According to the modern view of management skills, the activities performed by Melissa are task-related activities. They involve efforts to carry out critical management-related duties, such as planning, setting objectives for employees, and monitoring performance.

40) C

Clarifying roles involve assigning tasks and explaining job responsibilities, task objectives, and performance expectations. This helps in the delegation of authority.

41) A

Short-term planning involves determining how to use personnel and other resources to accomplish a task efficiently and determining how to schedule and coordinate activities efficiently.

42) D

In this scenario, Mark is supportive of his employees, encourages them to solve problems innovatively, and recognizes and rewards their efforts. In the context of the modern view of management skills, his efforts would be categorized under people-related activities. People-related activities involve efforts to manage people, such as by providing support and encouragement, recognizing contributions, developing employees' skills, and empowering employees to solve problems.

Ben used human relations skills to communicate effectively and understand the customer. Human relations skills are the skills required to work effectively with other people and perform other tasks, such as inspiring employees and defusing conflicts. These skills include the ability to communicate with, motivate, and understand people.

The developing skills of a manager involve providing coaching and advice, providing opportunities for skill development, and helping people learn how to improve their skills.

45) B

Ray is primarily utilizing consulting skills in this scenario. Consulting skills involve checking with people before making decisions that affect them, encouraging participation in decision making, and using the ideas and suggestions of others.

46) D

In this scenario, Maya has good conceptual skills. Supervisors with good conceptual skills have the ability to see the relationship of the parts to the whole and to one another. For a supervisor, conceptual skills include recognizing how the department's work helps an entire organization achieve its goals and how the work of various employees affects the performance of a department as a whole.

47) C

Here, Gary's skills can be categorized as technical skills, because he is skilled at keeping accurate records and work-related techniques.

Technical skills are the specialized knowledge and expertise used to carry out particular techniques or procedures. To be "technical," skills do not have to be mechanical or scientific; they can involve any work-related technique or procedure.

Michelle is primarily engaged in external monitoring. The external monitoring skill involves analyzing information about events, trends, and changes in the external environment to identify threats and opportunities for the work unit.

By teaching Steven how to deal with customers on his own, Elizabeth can help him develop his skills. As a skill of successful managers, developing involves providing coaching and advice, providing opportunities for skill development, and helping people learn how to improve their skills.

50) A

Encouraging innovative thinking involves challenging people to question their assumptions about the work they do and consider better ways of doing it. In this scenario, Aubrey challenges her employees to constantly evaluate their methods of working and develop better ways of working.

51) C

In this scenario, Margaret faces subtle discrimination at her workplace. Subtle forms of discrimination can include conscious or unconscious stereotyping, ignoring the input from the only woman at a meeting, and mistaking an African American professional for someone with a less prestigious job.

Supervision Concepts and Skill Building 11th Edition by Certo CH01

Subtle forms of discrimination persist in every workplace, and everybody holds some stereotypes that consciously or unconsciously influence their behavior. The subtle discrimination that results may include ignoring the input from the only woman at a meeting or mistaking an African American professional for someone with a less prestigious job.

In this scenario, Chang must question negative stereotypes regarding Emily and ask the employees to avoid such remarks. In the case of subtle discrimination, supervisors and other managers can use several tactics to improve attitudes. One of these is to question negative stereotypes. When an employee makes an offensive comment, a supervisor should point out the damage it does and ask the employee to avoid such remarks in the future.

54) C

In this scenario, Lorenzo is primarily engaged in the function of controlling. When something goes wrong, a supervisor must find a way to fix the problem or enable employees to do so. Monitoring performance and making needed corrections is the management function of controlling.

55) A

A supervisor's job includes determining a department's goals and the ways to meet them. This is the function of planning.

56) A

Christie is engaged in the function of planning. The planning function involves determining a department's goals and the ways to meet them. The purpose of planning by supervisors is to determine how a department can contribute to achieving an organization's goals. This includes planning how much money to spend.

57) C

Rhonda's responsibilities can be categorized as the supervisory function of organizing. Organizing involves setting up a group, allocating resources, and assigning work to achieve goals efficiently. At the supervisory level, organizing usually involves activities such as scheduling projects and assigning duties to employees.

58) B

In the context of supervisory functions, the staffing function involves identifying, hiring, and developing the necessary number and quality of employees.

59) A

The supervisor is responsible for letting employees know what is expected of them and inspiring and motivating employees to do good work. Influencing employees to act (or not act) in a certain way is the function of leading.

60) A

Even if a supervisor has the clearest and most inspired vision of how a department and its employees should work, this vision will not become a reality unless employees know and want to do their part. Influencing employees to act (or not act) in a certain way is the function of leading.

A supervisor needs to know what is happening in a department. When something goes wrong, the supervisor must find a way to fix the problem or enable employees to do so. Monitoring performance and making needed corrections is the management function of controlling.

62) A

Sandra is primarily engaged in controlling. When something goes wrong, a supervisor must find a way to fix the problem or enable employees to do so. Monitoring performance and making needed corrections is the management function of controlling.

63) B

In the context of management functions, higher-level managers are responsible for setting the overall direction for an organization; thus, they spend more time on planning and organizing.

64) D

Typically, supervisors spend most of their time leading and controlling, because they work directly with the employees who are producing or selling a product or providing support services. Planning, staffing, and organizing take up less of a supervisor's time.

65) D

In the context of the controlling function of management, when employees believe that help and feedback are related to their true skills and performance, they are more motivated to improve.

66) B

Organizing draws heavily on a supervisor's conceptual skills, but leading requires good human relations skills. The supervisor needs to be aware of and use behaviors that employees respond to as he or she desires.

67) C

In this scenario, Abigail is mainly performing the staffing function. A supervisor needs qualified employees to carry out the tasks that he or she has planned and organized. The activities involved in identifying, hiring, and developing the necessary number and quality of employees are known as the function of staffing.

68) B

This new task will draw heavily on Bilal's conceptual skills. Organizing draws heavily on a supervisor's conceptual skills. The function of organizing involves determining how to set up a group, allocating resources, and assigning work to achieve goals efficiently.

69) D

Supervisors work directly with the employees who produce or sell a product or provide support services. This is the reason why they spend most of their time leading and controlling people.

70) A

Ranjan instructs his students on the controlling function. Certain aspects of controlling relate back to planning. A good supervisor does not just plan to meet goals, but also finds ways to best utilize the people and the equipment available in order to meet or exceed goals.

71) D

It is the responsibility of a supervisor to provide an opportunity for employees to evaluate him or her.

72) A

One of the responsibilities of supervisors is to keep their staff informed and up to date.

73) B

Supervision Concepts and Skill Building 11th Edition by Certo CH01

Accountability refers to the practice of imposing penalties for failing to carry out responsibilities adequately, and it usually includes giving rewards for meeting responsibilities.

74) D

Supervisors are expected to serve as a kind of linchpin, or bridge, between employees and management. Thus, their responsibilities include building morale and carrying employee concerns to the relevant managers.

75) B

In this scenario, Sarah failed to keep her subordinates informed about the organization's targets. Keeping staff informed and up to date is one of the responsibilities of a supervisor.

76) A

Akira was good at performing the duties of his subordinate. One of the important responsibilities of a supervisor is to be able to perform the duties of the employees he or she supervises.

77) C

James should ask his boss to officially announce his new position in the company. To acquire power upon assuming the job of supervisor, it may help to have the new supervisor's boss make an official announcement of the promotion. When accepting the job, a supervisor can ask his or her boss to announce the promotion at a meeting of the employees.

78) B

Bill is exercising the accountability trait of a supervisor. Accountability refers to the practice of imposing penalties for failing to carry out responsibilities adequately, and it usually includes giving rewards for meeting responsibilities.

79) C

The best way for Salma to learn human relations skills is to read performance appraisals and observe the behavior of employees. A new supervisor can learn about management and supervision through books and observation. He or she can think about ways to carry out the role of supervisor.

80) A

In the context of performing supervisory duties, the right to do certain things is known as authority.

81) A

Power is the ability to do certain things.

82) D

Often, a new supervisor takes on his or her position as a result of promotion. The supervisor can transition smoothly to a position of power by acting in certain ways. One way is to encourage and teach employees to manage tasks the supervisor once handled, which builds a stronger work group and encourages employees to accept authority and responsibility.

83) B

Here, Bob should focus on preparing for the job and think about ways to carry out the role of supervisor. One way to combat the anxiety is to prepare for the job. A new supervisor can learn about management and supervision through books and observation.

Supervision Concepts and Skill Building 11th Edition by Certo CH01

To get to know employees, a supervisor can talk to his or her own manager and read performance appraisals, but the most reliable sources of information are the employees themselves. Particularly in the early days on the job, a supervisor should take time to discuss goals with employees and observe their work habits.

Isaac should try to understand Dexter's perspective and ask for his support in important tasks. A supervisor may learn that one or more employees had been candidates for the supervisor's job and therefore may be jealous. One constructive approach that a supervisor might take to this problem is to acknowledge the other person's feelings, ask for the employee's support, and discuss his or her long-term goals.

86) B

Most supervisors start out working in a department they now supervise. Because technical skills are relatively important for first-level managers, the person selected to be supervisor is often an employee with a superior grasp of the technical skills needed to perform well in the department.

87) C

In this scenario, Jinny would be a poor supervisor because she lacks the ability to inspire others to achieve their goals. Some employees are happier carrying out the technical skills of their field, whether it is carpentry, respiratory therapy, or financial management. People who prefer this type of work to the functions of managing will probably be happier if they turn down an opportunity to become a supervisor. In contrast, people who enjoy the challenge of making plans and inspiring others to achieve goals are more likely to be effective supervisors.

Supervision Concepts and Skill Building 11th Edition by Certo CH01

Kathleen lacks the ability to delegate. To be successful, supervisors must be able to delegate, that is, give their employees authority and responsibility to carry out activities. Since supervisors tend to have excellent technical skills, delegating may be a challenge.

89) D

In this scenario, Ray lacks the desire for the job. A successful supervisor must want the job. Some people are happier carrying out the technical skills of their field, whether it is carpentry, respiratory therapy, or financial management. People like Ray, who prefer this type of work to the functions of managing, will probably be happier if they turn down an opportunity to become a supervisor.

90) D

Jane has a negative attitude toward her position, which results in poor performance by her team. A successful supervisor has a positive attitude. Employees tend to reflect the attitudes of the people in charge. When the supervisor's attitude toward work, the organization, and change required by modern trends is positive, employees are more likely to be satisfied with and interested in their work.

91) B

In this scenario, Jonathan lacks the ability to delegate. To be successful, supervisors must be able to delegate, that is, give their employees authority and responsibility to carry out activities. The employees' successes show that the supervisor is able to select and motivate employees as well as delegate effectively.

Supervision Concepts and Skill Building 11th Edition by Certo CH01

A supervisor's commitment to employees and customers is significant because supervisors are critically important to their organizations. Supervisors inspire employees to do their best. By motivating employees to perform at their peak, the supervisor enables an organization to benefit from their commitment, talent, and enthusiasm.

Wilma lacks the trait of being fair. Successful supervisors who are fair treat all employees equally and have high expectations from all employees. They make assignments and decisions in the interest of the organization's goals, and not on the basis of whom they like.

94) B

Supervisors need to be good communicators. Employees and bosses alike depend on supervisors to keep them informed of what is happening. Employees who receive clear guidance about what is expected of them will not only perform better but also be more satisfied with their jobs. Good communication also includes making contact with employees each day and listening to what they have to say.

95) A

Delegation of authority means giving employees authority and responsibility to carry out activities. A good supervisor must be able to delegate authority effectively.

96) D

Henry lacked a desire for the job. A successful supervisor must want the job. Some people are happier carrying out the technical skills of their field, whether it is carpentry, respiratory therapy, or financial management. People who prefer this type of work to the functions of managing will probably be happier if they turn down an opportunity to become a supervisor.

98) Henri Fayol (1841–1925), a French industrialist, is often regarded as the pioneer of administrative theory. The ideas that he generated relative to general management principles are still considered to be important among contemporary thinkers. Mr. Fayol asserted that all managers have primary management functions to perform in organizations. These functions include:

- Planning: Setting goals for an organization, and developing an overall strategy for achieving the goals
- Organizing: Assigning tasks to specific members of the organization
- Leading: Motivating the employees of the organization to achieve the tasks that were given to them, as well as handling conflicts as they arise
- Controlling: Overseeing the various tasks that are being completed and ensuring that they are done in the expected manner; making sure that things go as planned

99) The activities a manager typically performs can be categorized into three groups:

- Task-related activities: Efforts to carry out critical management-related duties, such as planning, setting objectives for employees, and monitoring performance.
- People-related activities: Efforts to manage people, such as by providing support and encouragement, recognizing contributions, developing employees' skills, and empowering employees to solve problems.
- Change-related activities: Efforts to modify components of the organization, such as monitoring the environment to detect a need for change, proposing new tactics and strategies, encouraging others to think creatively, and taking risks to promote needed changes.

100) Good human relations skills are especially important in today's environment because of the increasing diversity of the U.S. workforce. While the share of white men in the workforce declines, the share of black, Hispanic, and Asian workers is expected to rise. Women are entering the workforce at almost the same rate as men. In addition, the decade of the 2030s, when all the Baby Boomers will be 65 and older, will represent a turning point in the composition of the U.S. population as one in five people in the nation will be of retirement age or older.

Together, these changes mean that supervisors can expect to have more employees who are female, nonwhite, and experienced—perhaps senior citizens holding a job after retirement. This growing diversity enables supervisors to draw on a greater variety of talent and gain insights into more perspectives than ever before.

Although diversity is not a new issue, the even greater diversity expected in the U.S. workforce of the future—coupled with laws and policies intended to ensure fair treatment of various groups—requires supervisors to work successfully with a much wider variety of people. Some of the people from other backgrounds may be the supervisor's own managers, partly owing to today's global economy.

101) Becoming a supervisor marks a big change in a person's work life. The new supervisor suddenly must use more human relations and conceptual skills and devote more time to planning ahead and keeping an eye on the department's activities.

Also, a change occurs in the supervisor's relationships with the employees in the department. Instead of being one of the crowd, the supervisor becomes a part of management—even the target of blame or anger when employees resent company policies. All these changes are bound to lead to some anxiety. It is natural to wonder whether you are qualified or how you will handle the problems that surely will arise.

102) Successful supervisors are loyal. As a part of the management team, they must take actions that are best for an organization. This responsibility may include making decisions that are unpopular with employees. In such situations, supervisors must recognize that taking on a supervisory job means they cannot always be “one of the gang.”

Successful supervisors are fair. Supervisors who play favorites or behave inconsistently will lose the support and respect of their employees and not be able to lead effectively. Also, when supervisors make assignments and decisions on the basis of whom they like best, they will not necessarily make the assignments and decisions best suited to the organization. Another aspect of being fair is to follow the rules yourself. The supervisor can set a good example, for instance, by being on time and refraining from doing personal tasks on the job or taking supplies home.
