Short Answer

23. Explain why American workers engaged in a record number of strike actions in the year following World War II:

Ans: American workers had joined unions during the New Deal years and World War II in record numbers but had pledged not to strike during the war out of loyalty and in the interest of a productive home front. When the lift of price controls, a lack of consumer goods, and large pent-up demand pushed up prices, existing wages lost much of their buying power. With the war won, unions argued, it was time to share the rewards of this victory with all working Americans.
Easy

24. Explain the significance of the Taft Hartley Act.

Ans: Over the veto of President Truman, Congress passed the Labor-Management Relations Act in 1947. This was a stunning setback for organized labor at the time since it ended the practice of the closed shop, opened the door for right-to-work-laws that sidelined unions, and permitted federal injunctions against strikes considered a threat to public health or safety. Finally, union leaders had to swear an oath that they were not communists, which led to a self-purging in organized labor.

Medium

25. Describe the impact of President Truman's executive order 9981.

Ans: President Truman's executive order from July 1948 set up procedures to end racial discrimination in the armed forces. The military leadership balked at this command, claiming that their organization was not the place to institute social reform. White rank-and-file soldiers also offered organized resistance. Only when the army experienced a man-power shortage during the Korean War did the order see execution.

Medium

26. Why did President Truman win the presidential election of 1948?

Ans: Given that Truman lacked the charm and popularity of his predecessor and had to run against two additional challengers—Wallace and Thurmond—that tried to appeal to the liberal and Southern segregationist wings of the Democratic Party respectively, it seemed certain that Truman was going to lose. However, Republican challenger Thomas Dewey ran a lackluster campaign while Truman made his case vigorously across the country. At the same time, fear of a possible Strom Thurmond presidency led that vast majority of liberals to abandon Wallace and stick with Truman.

Medium

27. Explain the significance of Hubert Humphrey's speech at the National Democratic Convention of 1948 in Philadelphia.

Ans: In 1948, the civil rights issue was threatening to become a dividing issue for the Democratic Party during their national convention. Sensing the revolt of southern party members, Truman withdrew from his commitment to strong plank on civil rights in the party platform, seeking to compromise. The speech of Hubert Humphrey—a representative of the Northern liberal wing of the party—demanded that the party commit firmly on the issue. His argument won the day, which also led a number of Southern delegates to walk out of the Philadelphia convention.
