Short Answer

1. Describe how subject matter jurisdiction can be established for a case to be heard in federal court. Provide one example for each method of establishing subject matter jurisdiction that you identify.

A federal question satisfies subject matter jurisdiction so that the case can be heard in federal court. Answers will vary regarding federal question, but any answer that identifies a federal statute, rule or regulation, treaty, or other federal law should be considered acceptable.

Complete diversity also satisfies subject matter jurisdiction. Parties must be from different states and the amount in controversy must be greater than $75,000. Any fact pattern described where those two items are present will satisfy complete diversity and should be considered an acceptable response.

- 2. Identify and discuss the differences between civil law and criminal law.
 - Criminal law addresses injuries to the public, while civil law addresses private wrongs or private injuries

- The government prosecutes a defendant in a criminal case, but a plaintiff sues a defendant in a criminal law. This also means that the government pays to prosecute the criminal case, while a private plaintiff pays to sue a civil defendant.
- Government will provide an attorney for a criminal defendant who cannot afford to provide his or her own attorney, but a civil defendant must pay for his or her own attorney in a civil case, if one is desired.
- In a criminal case, the standard of proof is beyond a reasonable doubt, but in a civil case, the standard of proof is by the preponderance of the evidence.
- In a criminal case, conviction may include loss of liberty and also may result in civil disabilities, but in a civil case, the legal remedy is typically monetary damages. There are no loss of civil liberties in a civil case, and a civil defendant is not incarcerated.

Essay Questions

1. Discuss when a summary judgment is appropriate. What are the benefits of a summary judgment? What are the drawbacks?

Answers should address the following points:

A party is entitled to summary judgment if there are no genuine issues of material fact and that party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law.

Benefits of a summary judgment is the trial can be avoided, which might afford less publicity, might be less expensive for both sides, and might expedite the resolution of the case.

Drawbacks to a summary judgment are that the parties will not get to have their day in court (assuming that the motion for summary judgment is brought before trial begins.)

A summary judgment is a final judgment and may be appealed. Since the issue on appeal in many cases where summary judge was granted focus on whether there were genuine issues of material fact, then the grant of summary judgment might not satisfy both parties.

Difficult

2. Identify and define six different sources of law, and provide an example of each.

Answers will vary. Different examples of each type of law will be provided.

Statutes – laws created by the legislature (e.g. Clean Water Act)

Treaties – a legal agreement between two or more nation-states (e.g. Migratory Bird Treaty Act)

Common law- judge made law (e.g. statutes are interpreted by the plain meaning of their words)

Rules and regulations – laws created by administrative agencies (e.g. any of the EPA's rules)

Constitutional law – based on the U.S. Constitution, but interpreted by judges (e.g. Roe v. Wade)

Executive Orders – an order issued by the Executive (e.g. US President or state governor) (e.g.

Executive Order 12898 related to environmental justice.)
