Short Answer/ Essay Questions

59. What are the four steps in the staffing function of the HR department?

Staffing involves the entire hiring process from posting a job to negotiating a salary package. Within the staffing function, there are four main steps:

- 1. development of a staffing plan
- 2. development of policies to encourage diversity in the workplace
- 3. recruitment
- 4. selection

Easy

60. What is the role of HR in increasing retention?

Retention involves keeping and motivating employees to stay within the organization. Compensation is a major factor to employee retention, but other reasons employees leave include:

- wish to work remotely
- career switch
- better work-life balance
- decided to start their own business
- seek higher pay

HR creates some strategies to retain the best employees and also address why it is so important to retain good employees. Additionally, HR takes other measures like conducting training programs so employees feel that they are developing new skills and stay motivated in their present job.

Easy

61. How does the external environment impact the human resources of an organization?

An HR manager also needs to consider the outside forces at play that may affect the organization. Outside forces, or external factors, are those things over which the company has no direct control over; however, they may be things that could positively or negatively impact human resources. Some factors of the external environment that the HR department needs to be aware of are:

- changes to employment law
- health-care costs
- changing workforce demographics
- a more highly educated workforce
- layoffs and downsizing
- technology used, such as HR databases
- increased use of social networking to distribute information to employees

Moderate

62. What is typically included in the compensation packages an organization's HRM professionals develop for an employee?

The package should take into consideration the employee's years of experience, education, and length with the organization and include:

- pay
- health benefits
- 401(k) (retirement plans)
- stock purchase plans
- vacation time, sick leave, and/or PTO
- bonuses
- tuition reimbursement

63. What are some examples of workplace policies HRM might be responsible for?

Workplace policies are usually the responsibility of the human resource department. Policies might include a discipline process, PTO (paid time off), dress code, ethics, internet usage, and work from home policies.

Easy

64. Describe the various skills required to be a successful HR manager.

An HR manager requires an array of skills to deal with a variety of situations. They need good organizational skills as they handle a lot of data and paperwork. This would help them manage time well. Multitasking, the ability to work on more than one task at a time, is important for an HR manager who has to shift between multiple duties and tasks on any given day. They also need sound people skills to manage a variety of personalities, work with conflict management, and coach others. Apart from their knowledge of HR, an understanding of specific job areas—such as managing the employee database or understanding employment laws—is imperative. Lastly, a sense of ethics and fairness is important as they deal with information that is often personal for employees and critical for the organization.

Moderate

65. What are the five certification exams that an HR professional may take?

68. What are the various cost-containment strategies used in organizations?

Costs are a major factor in the success or failure of a business, and the people part of the business is the most likely place for cuts when the economy is not doing well. Cost-containment strategies could involve reducing the amount spent on health care for employees, offering relevant training so employees function within the realm of legalities, and hiring the right candidate for the job to reduce the costs associated with turnovers. Additionally, companies may move jobs overseas in order to contain costs.

Easy

69. What is a cafeteria plan?

Cafeteria plans represent one possible strategy for containment of health-care costs. Cafeteria plans started becoming popular in the 1980s and have become standard in many organizations. This type of plan gives all employees a minimum level of benefits and a set amount to spend on flexible benefits, such as additional health care or vacation time.

It creates more flexible benefits where the employee, based on their family situation, can choose which benefits are right for them.

Easy

70. Does technology create additional stress on workers?

Technology creates additional stress because tools like e-mail and cell phones make employees more readily available. The fact that the employee is reachable beyond office hours or while they are at some remote location can no longer hinder an employee from completing work. Working for long hours using computers and the excessive use of other gadgets is known to have adverse health consequences. Technology helps employees too; with the advent of computers, many jobs can be executed much easier and quicker than when executed manually. Technology has provided us with the means to engage in clearer, quicker, and cheaper communication as well.

Easy

71. What are the implications of the baby boomer generation for HRM?

The implications of the baby boomer generation for Human Resource professionals are significant. First, the retirement of baby boomers results in a loss of a major part of the working population, and there are not enough people to fill those jobs which are left vacant. Second, the baby boomers' extensive knowledge is lost upon retirement. Much of this knowledge is not formalized or written down but contributes to the success of the business. Third, retired people are living longer and this results in higher health-care costs for all those currently in the workforce.

Easy

72. Provide some examples of what may be included in a code of ethics.

A code of ethics may include the expected ethics for the organization's employees, defining them, and defining the penalties that may be applied. It would foster an atmosphere of fair employment and procedures to handle complaints.

Easy

73. List the ways that HR can contribute to the sustainability goals of an organization.

Human resources can support sustainability by implementing policies and procedures including:

- helping to create an organization climate committed towards sustainability in all three areas
- engage internal and external stakeholders to determine the ways the organization can assist in sustainability efforts
- giving support to management to support sustainability efforts
- offer training on sustainability practices
- be part of the strategic solution for sustainability
